Charlie Wittmack is a world-class explorer, speaker, and attorney, who has been organizing major expeditions for nearly 15 years. As an adventurer, Charlie is perhaps best known for surviving a remarkable ascent of Mount Everest after making two back-to-back summit attempts without food or water during some of the worst weather in the recorded history of the mountain.

In addition to standing atop peaks during dozens of expeditions to the Andes, Alps, Africa, Alaska and Himalaya, Charlie has trekked across East Africa with the Masai, sailed the Indian Ocean in a handmade boat, and travelled 5400-miles across the United States on a bicycle. Charlie is also an accomplished open water swimmer, having completed numerous marathon swims around the world, including a 2008 attempt to swim the English Channel.

"SUMMITS OF SUCCESS" CUSTOM KEYNOTE

Charlie's "Summits of Success" customized keynote is used by major corporations and associations around the United States to motivate, entertain and inspire employees, customers or management groups. Charlie maximizes clients' return-on-investment by customizing his keynote for each audience through a highly collaborative process with each host. During his talks Charlie uses adventure stories to inspire and motivate, and to provide context for cutting-edge business concepts, while delivering organizational goals to program participants through a fun, "low friction" approach. The result is a keynote that educates and inspires, while delivering a consistent organizational message to every participant.
